Background and Alternatives Explored: The City of Missoula in 2019 was the first city in the nation to receive a Science Education Partnership Award from the National Institutes of Health (NIH). The award funds a project, led by Principle Investigator Holly Truitt (Truitt Consulting) and Co-Investigator Dr. Rachel Severson (University of Montana), to position The Link, Missoula's new library-museum complex, as a vibrant Third Place and a hub for health-science learning, healthy living, and STEM role-model engagement. The project aims in particular to reach traditionally underrepresented and underserved groups, including Native Americans, potential first-generation college students, and children from low-income backgrounds.

The Community Development Division, as the awardee of the grant, manages several subcontractors working on the project. Holly Truitt, of Truitt Consulting, is our principle investigator. These grant administrative agreements are compensation for that work, per the original grant application and agreements.

Financial Implications: The entire project is funded by the NIH. These grant administration agreements have no financial implications for the City budget and do not affect City funds. The grant administration agreements, which run from August 1, 2021 through July 31, 2022, are above the $25,000 contract limit stipulated in City of Missoula Administrative Rule #3, and so require City Council approval.
